THE DEMOCRATIC SITUATION.

Divided Counsels—The Fortunes of the Party at a Low Ebb

Washington Special to Chicago Tribune

Recent events in Washington have caused many democrats to consider the necessity of [illegible] and to revise some of their presidential programmes. In the course of a talk with some of the older party leaders views were expressed indicating that there is a disposition to look to new men for a candidate. Their views may be thus summarized:

The discussion of the present situation by democratic politicians in congress has at the present anything but a favorable tone. The fortunes of the party are at low ebb. Its counsels in the house are divided on the tariff question, and the utter absence of leadership has kept public business practically at a standstill. The party to-day is in no position to enter a presidential campaign, or, in fact, upon which its managers are cordially agreed. Unfortunately, too, there is no Moses in sight to guide the pilgrims to the promised land. There are many aspirants for the nomination, but no man yet named can secure a majority of the convention or measurably give it an earnest, energetic campaign. The indications here now are that a new man will be taken from the ranks and put at the head of the column.

If Samuel J. Tilden's inanimate frame could be galvanized into life it is probable the democrats would give him the nomination again to see the satisfactory way out of their trouble. But Mr. Tilden will not be the candidate. He has not only authorized the publication of his refusal, but has definitely informed Mr. Randall, Mr. W. L. Scott of Erie, Mr. Barnum and others of his determination to take no part in the contest beyond a contribution to the campaign fund and a word of advice to the candidates if a friend is nominated. Week before last Mr. Randall, Mr. Scott, Oliver Payne and one or two others had a conference at Buffalo, the details of which are unknown. Mr. Randall went west immediately after interviewing Mr. Tilden and the presumption is that the subject of the presidency was thoroughly canvassed by these wise men. Mr. Tilden has confidently informed his intimate friends that while favoring the selection of either Payne, Hendricks or Randall, he does not think the latter an available candidate. His reasons for considering Mr. Randall's nomination inadvisable are manifest. The ex-speaker is in a position where he must bear the brunt of a political fight, the ramifications of which will enter largely into the next campaign. He represents a pronounced minority of the party on the tariff question and the presentation of his name in the democratic convention at Chicago next July will be a slap in the face of those who represent a majority of the members of the democratic party on this issue. Randall is out of the question. Hoadly is an accident and amounts to no more in the solution of the presidential problem than Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania or Governor Cleveland of New York, both of whom are [illegible] mysteries, hummocks of earth thrown up above the dead line of mediocrity by a convulsion in the sea of politics.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER NOW IN SIGHT

The democratic party must carry New York and New Jersey to win the next presidential fight, and with a candidate who can poll the full party vote in Indiana. Ohio now appears to be hopelessly lost, for while Payne might win the state against an inferior candidate, either Blaine or Sherman would beat him there with ease. The democratic convention, notwithstanding the schemes of a few ambitious politicians with plenty of money, will be a fairly deliberative body, and, knowing the candidate of the opposition, will make its choice accordingly. Payne and Flower are the men most often mentioned here now as the probable nominees of the democratic convention. For years past the democratic party has posed before the people as the enemy of monopolies and it is professedly hostile to the influences of Wall street. It is hardly probable now that the representatives of the party will put at the head of its ticket a man whose name is synonymous with the greatest monopoly in the United States—the Standard Oil Company—and choose for vice president a Wall street stock jobber. It is said that Mr. Payne has no interest in the Standard Oil Company, and that his son Oliver Payne is the only member of the family identified with that corporation. In 1880, however, Oliver Payne, after Mr. Tilden had withdrawn from the contest, pledged $5,000,000 to the democratic campaign fund in the event of his father's nomination and the inference now is that if money could buy the [illegible] Henry B. Payne would be the democratic nominee.

There is every indication that the democratic candidate will be chosen from one of the eastern states. Bayard, a chronic candidate, is not seriously considered, because his record on the tariff and financial questions is not such as to commend him to the good will of the people or the states that are essential to democratic success. Flower is making a desperate push for the first place on the ticket, but his ambition is not worthy of serious consideration. Randall, as before stated, is impracticable. The democrats, therefore, are looking around for a new man upon whom all can unite—a man whose personal character and political record will bear the closest inspection—whose nomination would be a guarantee not only to the business community but to the world generally of the country of an honest, intelligent and faithful administration, and who would poll the full vote of the party in the states which must be carried by the democrats if they hope to win.

SENATOR McPHERSON

Several names have been mentioned, but none so prominently as that of Senator J. R. McPherson of New Jersey. Mr. McPherson is beginning his second term of service in the senate. He is in favor of the correction of the inequalities and inconsistencies of the tariff and a gradual reduction of duties to the point where revenue necessary for the expenses of the government economically administered is reached, with incidental protection to the American laborer and to American industries. By his vote in the tariff bill of March 3, 1883, passed the senate. He voted for that measure not because he approved of all its provisions, but foreseeing the present stagnation of business he desired to eliminate from the situation an element of disturbance and confusion to the business community. Mr. McPherson thinks the proposed agitation of the tariff this session is unnecessary, as nothing practical in the way of revenue reform can be accomplished with a hostile senate and executive. As a member of the finance committee of the senate Mr. McPherson is thoroughly informed as to the necessity for further tariff legislation, and whenever a bill can be prepared which will receive the dispassionate consideration of both branches of congress he will do all in his power to assist in the work. Senator McPherson was the author of the tariff plank in the New Jersey platform upon which the state was carried by the democrats last fall. He is the author of the bill which recently passed the senate by an overwhelming majority to prevent contraction of the currency by the surrender of national bank circulation. Senator McPherson favors the national banking system because in his opinion it gives the people of the country the safest guarantee for their investments that has yet been devised. He is not, however, wedded to the system, and would willingly abandon it for any other sound banking policy that could with equal safety to the public be devised. Senator McPherson's nomination would in the judgment of his friends not only guarantee to the democratic party the electoral votes of New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, but of Ohio as well. Living in New Jersey, Mr. McPherson is thoroughly acquainted in New York, where he enjoys the confidence and respect of the business men of the metropolis. [illegible] New Jersey and New York will [illegible] his friends say he [illegible] his nomination. He is not only a close friend of ex-Governor Tilden, but [illegible] is the esteem and friendship of the Tammany leaders. None of the New York candidates could guarantee the cordial support of the rival city factions, but Mr. McPherson would have every interest [illegible] at his back. In Indiana and Ohio he would poll the full democratic vote. The New Jersey senator is in the prime of life, a man of wealth and high social standing, and he is one of the best political organizers in the democratic party.

Great Salt Lake

A gentleman who has been lately sailing on the Dead sea of America thus describes it: "When we were on our way toward the hazy western shore, as we passed along, the sea gulls circled around us or floated on the water, their white plumage glittering in the sunlight. Every now and then a heron would flit by us, high overhead; dragon flies would stop long enough to gaze at us curiously and then spin off toward the distant islands. Occasionally a 17-year-old locust would hum past as if to mock at us for ever daring to believe that this is the Dead Sea of America. As the bow plowed through the water millions of small diptera flies would rise from the water where they were resting and cover the bow of the boat till quarts of them could be collected. Wherever we went we observed the same thing. The water of the lake is their home and they are as much at home on the water as a skipper is on an eastern pond. In some places where it is calm these flies darken the water for miles. Here (not on the beach) they lay their eggs, here they hatch, and here the larvæ live by the million till ready for the pupa state, when they attach themselves to the seaweed floating everywhere in the water and remain till they emerge as perfect flies. The larvæ doubtless prey upon the strange little shrimps that live in the water. There are infinite numbers of these, as there is scarcely a place in the lake where a bucket of water can be dipped without taking up from twenty to 500 of them. It is strange that people should call this a dead sea, for though the number of species does not exceed ten or fifteen, there is no lake, fresh or salt, in the world that contains half as many living things as Great Salt Lake."

Imitation Jewels.

New York Mail and Express

I wonder if any one would believe me if I should tell the names of some ladies well known in society who possess handsome and very valuable jewels patronize a certain manufacturer of imitation stones, to duplicate their jewels? The perfection to which the art of imitating sapphires and rubies has arrived is astonishing. It is almost impossible to detect the sham, as a surface of the genuine stone is placed on the top of the imitation, giving the effect of the genuine article. I happened to pass the store in Broadway where this work is done the other afternoon and saw a lady I know well come out of it. My curiosity impelled me to enter and inquire of the clerk if they had many fashionable lady customers. The clerk said "yes" and added that I would be astonished if he should tell me the names of his customers. He referred to the lady who had just left the store as having given him an order for some artificial jewelry.

THE G STREET SEWER.

PORTLAND, April 7

To the Editor of the Oregonian

Understanding that a petition is being circulated to try and prevent the proposed sewer on G street from being built, I would ask that all property owners requested to sign said petition do give plenty of thought to the subject before putting their names to the paper. The proposed sewer is one much needed, and the more sewers we have the less disease we suffer from, nothing being more conducive to ill health and disease than stagnant water, etc. The work will afford employment to many men. It can be built cheaper now than in the future and it is very necessary, and I cannot see why any person should try to prevent such a work from going on.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Governments strong; railway bonds strong and higher. Stocks opened weak and in the first fifteen minutes further declined ¼@1½ per cent, Lake Shore and Western Union being the greatest sufferers. At the first call there was an improved feeling on the report that several of the most prominent railway capitalists had held a conference and resolved to support prices at or about the present figures. Following this was a sharp demand for Union Pacific, which rose from 73⅞ to 75¼, transactions on the way up being enormous. The advance in Union Pacific led to purchases of the general list and there was a general advance. After noon, under sales to realize profits, prices receded 1¼ to 1¾ per cent, but in closing dealings there was a rally of ¼ to ¾. Pacific Mail led the recovery. The market left off firm. Compared with Saturday's closing prices are ⅛ to 1 per cent higher for Northern Pacific preferred, Oregon and Transcontinental, Pacific Mail and Manitoba, and ⅛@1 per cent lower for Central Pacific and Western Union. Oregon Short Line declined 2 to 20. Dealings in Union Pacific aggregated 91,000 shares.

The First Trip on the New Steamer—The Approach to the Mines

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN.]

[illegible], April 3

When anything uncommon is going forward I always like to be in at the front, and for the past two days my desire has been gratified to the fullest extent. The first voyage of the steamer [illegible] [illegible] has been to note and [illegible]. On Monday Capt. Sanborn began thinking over the trip; we had made arrangements the day before by all going with the wheel, and the result of his thinking was a determination to pull on and try his chances. There was [illegible] as far as could be seen, with rumors of open water below.

On deciding to start he procured some lumber and lined the boat, sheathed her inside with a false nose of lumber, and Tuesday we made a start just after dinner with one or two invited guests and a few passengers who [illegible] to be taken. Being for a good start her nose was plunged into the ice. It stayed there. The ice was too heavy to be split, so that way through evidently quite rotten. The captain said very little, but turned back and tied up. The passengers all got off and everybody about the boat maintained a silence that comes only with chagrin. The captain kept on thinking, and the result of this second [illegible] of thinking was that in less than an hour we were on our way through the ice field, the false nose of heavy timber having been replaced for an iron [illegible] shutter, and so we split our way for two miles, when we came to water—the open polar sea—we called it. There were none on board but the captain and his men and passengers [illegible] and so the experiment went on without [illegible].

We had open water all the way down to the Farrington Landing, on the western shore of the lake. It was now dark and since not a single man on the boat had ever navigated these waters before or even been over them, it was decided to tie up for the night. Mr. Harrington, whose warehouse stands out on this bold point, had a big fire burning and came down to tell us where to land. Then he and his wife came on board, surprised and glad to spend the evening with somebody from a point of [illegible] civilization. Farrington Landing is said to be twenty miles from Fort Coeur d'Alene, but I think it is thirty or more miles. I believe the boat will easily make that part of the trip in an hour and a half. She runs beautifully and handles like a well broke horse. At this landing there is a lot of freight waiting for her, but the feeling [illegible] is to be [illegible] to give the entire trip to experimenting. We started off next morning with Mr. Harrington and his wife and invited guests, and made a run for the mouth of the river, five miles away.

Nothing but patience, perseverance and a deal of new tricks in navigation ever got us through that [illegible]. In the first place we tried the middle, backing and [illegible] the wheel for an ice breaker until a point had been reached where it was a foot thick. Then the captain put for clear water and hunted thin ice near the east shore. After trying this [illegible] 2 hours here it was found to be impossible to [illegible] a crooked bank and the heavy ice which was blown hard up. In this [illegible] and just as the captain was debating what the next experiment should be a [illegible] of [illegible] which had worked its way in and out down the coast shot around the point in our wake or [illegible] our [illegible]. An exploring party from the [illegible] direction had reported open water [illegible] and [illegible] and from there to the mouth of the Coeur d'Alene river, so the captain shouted to the [illegible] to break a trail [illegible] and take themselves their boats and freight of flour and [illegible] as far as the Mission if they would all [illegible] and [illegible] still quite full of ice. They [illegible] of [illegible] and presently the [illegible] man who acted as their secretary of the [illegible] shouted back that they would do it. [illegible] opened the way and now we are steaming up the most placid, deep and beautiful river that can be imagined, with stately rows of trees on either side, broad flat fields from the [illegible] to the bank, and fir, spruce and tamarack growing thickly as far as we can see, except where there are openings of heavy wild meadow. [illegible] the swans fly up from the [illegible] and [illegible] at every [illegible] the whistle [illegible]. It is like a [illegible] the trip of [illegible]. While we were tied at the bank last night about [illegible] the mouth of the river the [illegible] and their [illegible] and [illegible] impressed the novelty and beauty of the [illegible] situation.

I heard the [illegible] from [illegible], an enterprising [illegible] who [illegible] miles above the Mission. [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] [illegible] It is [illegible] the Mission and [illegible] leaves the river [illegible] trail [illegible].

My next will be from the mining camp.

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION

An Examination of Mr. Blaine's Claims and a Statement of Objections to his Candidacy

Last week's issue of Harper's Weekly has the following leader on Mr. Blaine as a candidate for the presidency:

Ex-Governor Claflin of Massachusetts is reported as saying in a recent interview in New York that Mr. Blaine could not carry Massachusetts. He has a very small following there. I should be afraid the state would go democratic if he were nominated. His [illegible] nomination would also mean defeat in the nation. He [illegible] is what is called a regular republican, to use the phrase [illegible]. If satisfactory nominations are made our independents will stay with us; if not they will [illegible] their vote. On the same day that the Tribune published this report of ex-Governor Claflin's views, the Herald said in its Washington correspondence: On the republican side there is among the closest political calculators a growing disposition to leave Mr. Blaine out of the list of possibilities on the ground that his administration would for various reasons imperil the success of the party. In regard to these suggestions we have received several letters from sincere and earnest republicans asking how and why it is that the one possible candidate mentioned whose name excites enthusiasm among his supporters, an unswerving republican, a man of brilliant parts, and personally charming and accomplished, of the most marked tastes and talent for public affairs, of recognized political ability and of long and varied public experience, should seem to be a seriously objectionable candidate to the independent voter.

The question is of the highest importance, because the vote of New York is usually thought to be indispensable to republican success, and that vote will be undoubtedly determined by the independent voters. It is not enough to suggest, to demonstrate—even if that were possible—that this or that man could be nominated at Chicago. It must be shown also that he will probably carry New York. Ex-Governor Claflin says that Mr. Blaine could not carry Massachusetts. We presume that few will [illegible] that republicans suppose that he could carry New York. Such a hope could only be cherished by an enthusiasm which is sure that any candidate who should be nominated by the republicans at Chicago would be approved by New York. The reasons for this conviction in regard to the unavailability of Mr. Blaine are various, and among them, as affecting the political situation, must be included the fact that Mr. Blaine, although himself the author of the phrase "stalwart," is especially obnoxious to stalwarts in New York as chiefly instrumental in the great [illegible] overthrow of 1881. This feeling would make hearty support of his candidacy very difficult for many republicans of that "stripe." They would not protest or bolt, but they would see with equanimity the failure of Mr. Blaine to reach the goal which Mr. Conkling could not win. But the graver reason is that which would alienate the controlling independent vote, one of another kind, and of a kind which would make the campaign a prolonged defense when such a necessity would be disastrous.

These reasons as we understand them are first the character of the disclosures in 1876 regarding the railway transactions. The whole story would be told again and would require explanations which would be more satisfactory to independent voters now than they were when first made eight years ago. The second reason is apprehension of a vigorous or "brilliant," or "dashing" and restless foreign policy which, under existing circumstances, would probably lead to undesirable foreign complications. The third reason is an apparent want of sympathy with administrative reform, which has never received any hearty support from Mr. Blaine, which is, indeed, hostile to the school of politics in which he is held to be a master, and which has been contemptuously assailed by his near friends. To these reasons may be added the fact that many of the independent voters of New York are friendly to revenue reform, while Mr. Blaine is a pronounced protectionist. These and such as these are the considerations that explain the unavailability for New York of the candidacy of Mr. Blaine, and similar reasons doubtless alienate the feelings of Massachusetts voters as described by ex-Governor Claflin. These reasons ought not to be lightly regarded, because they are not of a kind to be overcome by an enthusiastic party hurrah. We state them frankly because, although the conviction of his extreme unavailability as a candidate is very widely felt, it is not often nor plainly expressed. Those who, like ourselves, earnestly desire republican success must not shut their eyes and ears, nor encourage others to do so. A nomination often determines the result of an election, and the nomination should be made, therefore, only upon the most careful comparison of views, and the most explicit statement of actual opinion and feeling. No republican candidate can carry New York who does not unite in his cordial support the three great sections of republican voters, the independents, the half breeds and the stalwarts. Any republican anywhere in the country who knows what those words describe, and who recalls the republican result in New York in 1879 and 1882, can decide for himself whether Mr. Blaine would be an available republican candidate for New York, and whether, therefore, his nomination would increase the chances of continued republican control of the national administration.

Apocryphal Stories of Lincoln

A story has been going the rounds of the press concerning the awkwardness of Abraham Lincoln in his black suit and black silk hat at the time of his first inauguration, of the courtesy of Senator Douglas in holding his hat for him during the reading of his address. This leads the Chicago News to say: "Mr. Lincoln's dress for twenty five or thirty years previous to his inauguration as president was almost invariably a black dress of the finest broadcloth and a black silk hat. That was the dress of the members of the bar and judges of courts in Illinois—of Judge Douglas, Governor Bissell, John T. Hardin, Colonel Baker, Vivian Edwards, John T. Stewart and others—during all that time. The awkwardness of Mr. Lincoln in such dress is consequently wholly in the imagination of writers who know next to nothing of the man they pretend to describe."

The Real Cause of the Death of the Duke of Albany.

GOSSIP AND SCANDAL FROM OVER THE SEA

General Gordon's Desperate Position in the Soudan—The Cambridge Crew Defeats the Oxfords—Notes

THE REAL CAUSE OF THE DUKE'S DEATH

Despite the painfully fulsome and ridiculously pretty articles in the papers about the duke of Albany, the truth with regard to the circumstances of his death is creeping out. It is now universally acknowledged that the prince is dead because he was a [illegible] for the first time in his life to go about [illegible]. Intoxicated with this unusual freedom and in revolt against the idea that he was an invalid [illegible] that he could [illegible] fortunately [illegible] played [illegible] and so brought on the fatal fit [illegible] the disease from which he had suffered all his life. [illegible] in truth is the royal journalist who tells even a little of the real [illegible] goes so far as to express regret that the [illegible] was ever allowed to marry.

[illegible] laughing in the sleeve over the ostentatious woe of the prince of Wales, as it is notorious that he rather disliked his brother. Members of the government displayed a certain inclination to ride on the tide of popular emotion by proposing an allowance to a child of the duke already in existence and the one which is coming, but they were warned by some of their radical supporters that such a proposal would be resisted. It was also said the motion would be aroused to real alarm by the prospect of allowances to the numerous tribe of the queen's grandchildren. It was also pointed out that the princess has an allowance of £1,000, which for an impecunious German girl was not bad.

The newspapers meantime continue to supply food for curious reflection on the extraordinary [illegible] of English journalism. A lively controversy has gone on as to whether the queen did or did not fall in a faint when she first heard the news. One reporter in want of additional details [illegible] the tears of the [illegible] and the [illegible] servants of the prince's household. In short the chief moral of the episode is the completeness with which a comedy of universal hypocrisy can be carried out by the English press.

THE QUEEN'S HEALTH

The queen maintains good health in spite of the shock caused by the death of the duke of Albany. Her medical advisers insist upon the necessity of outdoor exercise. In consequence of this she drives daily about the private grounds of Windsor. Arrangements for the funeral, down to the most minute details, were made under her personal direction. From a pecuniary point of view the duchess is left in a very uncomfortable position. She has a dowry voted by parliament of £6,000 a year. The duke was not careful in the management of his financial affairs [illegible] was doubled on settling up the duchess [illegible] will get another year's sum of £2,000, and have [illegible] also a sufficient sum for keeping up Claremont. It is rumored on a [illegible] that the duke's death was hastened by the fast pace of his life at Nice and Monaco. [illegible] day before his death he spent four hours at the Monaco gambling tables where he suffered heavy losses. The atmosphere was stifling, the [illegible] and the duke was [illegible] by the throng and became [illegible]. All [illegible] the official [illegible] of this [illegible] was [illegible] in [illegible] of the [illegible] in which the [illegible] occurred.

SCANDALS.

The divorce suit of Earl Euston has developed a [illegible] complication of an opera bouffe [illegible]. When [illegible] married the lady [illegible] time of her marriage with him [illegible] had apparently [illegible] the [illegible] that her [illegible] was [illegible] living at the time she was [illegible] and the heir to a duke [illegible] with the cast-off mistress of half a dozen [illegible].

Details of the Lady Colin Campbell case are still [illegible] rather than of a [illegible] She [illegible] and [illegible] who is [illegible] than his [illegible] of [illegible].

MARY ANDERSON

Mary Anderson has made a necessary protest against [illegible] generally unfair paragraphs which are [illegible] daily [illegible] concerning [illegible] anxious [illegible] that [illegible] to [illegible] pulls [illegible] that [illegible] enjoys among [illegible] friends [illegible] that she received [illegible] She [illegible] after her [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] that comes [illegible] the [illegible] of the funeral of the duke of Albany, and this [illegible]

A [illegible] QUESTION

The action of the [illegible] against Earl [illegible] Yates, editor of the World, has [illegible] in the law [illegible] that [illegible] Yates [illegible] The question is asked [illegible] was [illegible] the prosecution directed [illegible] person really guilty? Was it to be [illegible] member of the privileged class?

GORDON'S DESPERATE POSITION

Dispatches from Cairo represent General Gordon's position as desperate. Reports from Berber are that the [illegible] had entire command of the Nile between Khartoum and Berber. The governor of [illegible] to Gordon asking for help [illegible] garrison. He says he will not be able to hold out another month. Gordon advised him to try to arrange a capitulation, as help from Khartoum is impossible.

NOTES FROM THE CONTINENT

Abroad the week has been singularly uneventful, one point of interest being the illness of the German emperor and his refusal to release Bismarck from any of his many positions.

Some excitement has been caused by the discovery of forged English notes on the continent.

Bismarck's organs have given a tangible proof of their feverish desire to conciliate Germany by objecting to [illegible] a well known [illegible] Prussia and [illegible] it should be regarded as an insult by the Russians.

GERMANY

SARGENT INTERVIEWED

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—Cable special to the Herald from Berlin: Your correspondent had an interview to-day with Minister Sargent.

"Why did you decline the St. Petersburg mission and resign?" was asked.

"Because," Sargent replied, "the action of the president and senate shows that I may properly leave this post and gives me a long coveted opportunity to retire without the feeling of deserting my duty or being guilty of cowardice. I wished for an end of the situation, long painful and recently intolerable, yet from which I could not see any way of honorable retreat. That way is now generously provided. Therefore I resign with perfect good humor and with thankfulness to the government for vindicating me. The sense of possessing the confidence of the American people is all the reward I want, so I do not value the St. Petersburg mission a straw in comparison to these other considerations. I need rest after these prolonged excitements and will adopt private life as the only mode of gaining it.

The body of young Edwards, drowned on last Wednesday, was shipped to his home in [illegible], by the Northern Pacific express from Seattle Saturday.

A terrible accident occurred on Ridge Prairie several days ago near Layton. By some means the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Jenks got its feet so badly scalded with hot water that after several days of terrible suffering it closed its eyes in death.

Arrangements have been made by the lodges where Sprague Lodge No. [illegible] I. O. O. F. will join Cheney Lodge in a grand celebration at Spokane Falls on the 26th instant for the purpose of celebrating the sixty fifth anniversary of Odd Fellowship. The Spokane lodge has made all necessary arrangements for a grand time and have provided for the reception of all visitors who may be pleased to attend.

Seattle Chronicle: The call for a meeting to effect the organization of a military company in Seattle was favorably received, judging from the number of young men who assembled in Yesler hall last evening. J. C. B. Hubbard was chosen temporary chairman, and F. H. Norman temporary secretary. Several addresses were made by gentlemen interested in the matter, and a committee on enrollment and another on constitution and by-laws were chosen. Nearly fifty members signed the roll last night. The next meeting is announced for next Friday night.

An Old Man's Kindness to a Friend

Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin

Since the late Harvey Chappell was murdered in Lebanon much has been printed concerning his parsimony, but the evidences of his kindheartedness have not been presented to the public. A few years ago the sick son of a Norwich gentleman expressed a desire for an apple from Mr. Chappell's place but a few days before his death. It was in January and there was no direct communication with that part of Lebanon in which Mr. Chappell lived. The very next morning the Norwich man met Mr. Chappell in a bank in this city and told him of his son's wish, and asked him if there was any way the apples could be sent the next day. Mr. Chappell said there was, and departed. The following day was one of the worst of the winter, but Mr. Chappell arrived at 10 A. M. with a lot of choice fruit in his carpet bag, and left it at the sick man's house, refusing to accept anything for it. When the Norwich gentleman reached his son's house at midday Mr. Chappell had come and gone. The mother of the sick man asked her husband if he knew how Mr. Chappell came to town. He replied: "I suppose he drove in." "No," she rejoined, "he told me the traveling was so bad that he did not wish to drive his horse in, so he walked." A messenger was at once dispatched to find Mr. Chappell, and to see that he was taken home in as good a carriage as could be furnished. All search for the man failed, and he returned home on foot, having walked sixteen and a half miles to gratify the wish of a sick man for whose parents he cherished a warm regard. When he performed this feat he was nearly 70 years of age. Those who knew him best say that he was always present[ing] little tokens of esteem to those he loved.

Health of the Present Age

Chambers' Journal

Man has in his own hands the power, both of largely increasing and decreasing his chances of early death, and nowhere is this fact better exemplified than in the lessened mortality which follows even moderate attention to the laws of health. The words of Dr. Farre deserve to be emblazoned in every home, and in respect of their pungent utterance concerning the good which mankind is able to effect by even slight attention to sanitary requirements. "The hygienic problem," says Dr. Farr, "is how to free the English people from hereditary disease and to develop in the mass the athletic, intellectual, esthetical, moral and religious qualities which have already distinguished some of the breed. There is a divine image in the future to which the nation must aspire. The first step toward it is to improve the health of the present age, and improvement, if as persistently pursued as it is in the cultivation of inferior species, will be felt by their children and their children's children. A slight development for the better in each generation implies progress in the geometrical progression which yields results in an indefinite time that if suddenly manifested would appear miraculous."

DR. C. McLANE'S
Celebrated Liver Pills
In offering to the public Dr. C. McLane's Celebrated Liver Pills as a remedy for Liver and Bilious Complaints, we presume no apology will be needed. The great prevalence of Liver Complaint and Bilious Diseases of all kinds throughout the United States, and particularly in the West and South, where, in the majority of cases, the patient is not within the reach of a regular physician, requires that some remedy should be provided that would not in the least impair the constitution and yet be safe and effectual. That such is the character of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, there can be no doubt. The great success which has invariably attended their use, will, we think, be sufficient to convince the most incredulous. It has been our sincere wish that these Pills should be fairly tested, and stand or fall by the effects produced. That they have been so tested and that the result has been in every respect favorable, we call tens of thousands to witness who have experienced their beneficial effects.
DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS are not held forth or recommended, (like most of the popular medicines of the day), as universal cure-alls, but simply as a specific for Liver Complaints and those symptoms connected with a deranged state of that organ.

CONVERSATION.

The decline in our modern life of the arts of letter writing and of conversation is chiefly due to the increased importance of the press. If Madame de Levigne and Anne de Longueville had lived in the nineteenth century, they would probably have turned their literary gifts to journalism or to novel writing rather than to private correspondence. And the brilliant and copious talkers, who influenced politics and literature through their coffee-house discussion in Johnson's day, would, in ours, seek a wider audience through the medium of the daily press. The arts of conversation and letter writing have been superseded by the art of journalism, just as the art of oratory, so long cultivated by the Grecian generals as a means of controlling their troops, was superseded by the perfected art of military discipline. In both cases the substitute was preferred as the most effectual means of influence and control. As a means of display, too, conversation and correspondence would be more prized and practiced in the pre-journalistic days. A man's originality of thought had then a chance to win admiring attention, but now, on all current topics the morning papers "say his good things first" and no one cares to hear them repeated.

But the press is not wholly responsible for the decline of conversation. The multiplication in recent times of remunerative forms of business, requiring intelligence and administration, and the idea that labor is honorable, which even in Europe has been growing, have resulted in the diminution of that class which has had the leisure to cultivate conversation as a social accomplishment. There was a time when successful business men could afford themselves some leisure. They would say, "I am making enough and will not exert myself to extend my trade further." But the sharp competition of these days leaves them no such choice. They are obliged to make the most they can or lose what they have. If they do not strain every nerve to undersell, they will be undersold, and, in underselling, their profits are so curtailed that they must increase their operations or collapse. Partly, because the press anticipates opinion on serious topics, and, partly, because the overstrained minds of men of affairs are relaxed in social converse, we have lost the art of that noble and delightful talk which, in Rousseau's time, was common among the best company in Paris. "Their conversation," he wrote, "consists neither in dissertation or epigram; they reason without argumentation; they have pleasantry without punning; they associate with skill, genius and reason, maxims and flashes of wit, sharp satire and severe morality. They run through all subjects that each one may have something to say, and they exhaust none for fear of tiring their hearer; they propose their themes casually, they treat them rapidly, and precision leads to elegance. Each one delivers his opinion and supports it briefly; no one attacks with heat that of another, nor defends obstinately his own; they examine in order to enlighten and stop before it becomes a dispute. Each is both instructed and amused, and all are pleased; even the sage himself bears away recollections worthy of his meditation in the silence of retreat."

The power of expressing thought with grace and directness is, to some extent, a natural gift, but it may be greatly improved by cultivation and greatly impaired by careless habits of slovenly or slangey speech. Young people, who wish to improve their conversational powers, should always attempt the expression of every idea they find it difficult to put into language. They can do this with or without hearers, but their progress will be more satisfactory if they often perform this student's work without listening ears to hurry them into inadequate expression. Public speakers often acknowledge that their most brilliant figures of speech, which seemed to be the product of the moment's inspiration, had been carefully elaborated in moments of leisure. This was the case with Webster's celebrated characterization of Hamilton as the man who "touched the corpse of the public credit and it sprang upon its feet." It is the case continually and would be oftener acknowledged if it were not for that absurd affectation of impromptu powers which led Melbourne and Palmerston to affect social frivolity the more, the more laboriously they were engaged in preparing their public efforts. It is an antique saying that "the gods sell all things for labor, which is the price;" and we may be sure that without labor the prizes of ambition cannot be grasped.

But the charm of conversation is by no means wholly dependent on intellectual gifts and special training. The character of the talker has much to do with the pleasure with which he is heard. Sincerity and naturalness give dignity to very simple speech, and there is no grace like kindliness. Egotism, impatience, disputatiousness, inaccuracy and intentional deceit, arbitrariness and malicious severity so often disfigure conversation because so often they are defects of character. Monopolizing talk, by interrupting other talkers or giving them no opening, is a fault of manner not wholly attributable to mere ardor of temperament. In large measure it is due to an overbearing disregard of the rights of others, and a contempt for their opinions, and, as such, it excites more personal resentment than any other conversational offense. In opposition to the endless talkers we are all anti-monopolists, and sympathize with the retort which Aristotle gave to one of them who, after wearying him with his long-drawn stories, exclaimed: "What! are you not astonished?" To which the philosopher replied: "What astonishes me is that anyone would use his ears in listening to you when he can use his legs in getting away."

To those who have often engaged in the polite pastime of fashionable calls the tinkling, ting-a-ling kind of talk, which has no meaning in it, must be only too familiar. To the male mind few things are more surprising than the apparent zest with which two or more ladies, with all their bright plumage spread, will turn their beruffled necks and chatter simultaneously about trifles or truisms which each one knows and no one cares to hear. Like Mrs. Waters, in Fielding's great novel, they appear to have mastered the art of using words as "fa, la, la, ra, da, &c., are used in music, only as the vehicles of sound and without any fixed ideas."

But it is better that talk should be meaningless than mean; and among mean ways of talking there are few more contemptible than the repetition of a scandal by one who, with an air of superior justice, or charity, denies its truth or admits that he cannot vouch for its truthfulness. Under such circumstances to give it wings by uttering it is, to say the least, an act of criminal carelessness. "A lie," says the proverb, "will travel round the world while truth is pulling on his boots," and we may be sure that of all lies a scandal is the swiftest, while the truth which denies or the doubt which questions it is both lame and lazy.

The very general use of slang shows how little reverence is usually felt for the noble language which Chaucer and Shakespeare and Milton enriched, and which intimates the history, as well as the mental and moral characteristics of a great race. Men and women who have inherited a language adapted to the precise communication of shades of thought are content to say "splendid" for everything they like and "beastly" for everything they dislike and "all right" for whatever is fairly satisfactory. Like the boy who didn't want but one shirt, because then he always knew which one to put on, they want only one word, so as to be saved the trouble of selection. Even such abominable jargon as "toney," "cheeky," "bully," and the like, is used by people who have had some opportunities of cultivation and might have become good talkers. But they got hold of these labor-saving words, with no precise meaning, and neglected to acquire a varied and expressive vocabulary.

At the opposite pole from the slang-users are the purists—the precisians in speech, who are also, as a rule, martinets in manners. They pick their way through their sentences holding on to their skirts, as it were, lest they should chance to run against an improper word. Ambitious and conscientious young school teachers, who have had limited social and educational opportunities, are very apt to belong to this class. They are the slaves of established usage, and if they had governed the character of the language it would never have been enriched by idioms nor vivified by imagination nor enlarged by progressive variations. They would have condemned as slang new words and phrases which give vigor and brevity to speech, and which, because of their usefulness or brilliancy, deserve to be received as legitimate children of the mother tongue. In his "Impressions of the United States" Mr. Freeman tells "an Oxford tale of five-and-thirty years ago" which well illustrates the extended meaning which words sometimes acquire through a bold and brilliant innovation. "A story," he says, "was told in the common-room of an American clergyman who was in the habit of getting into theological discussion with his bishop, and who was sometimes a little puzzled as to the way in which he ought to behave in such cases toward his spiritual superior. 'I had a respect for his office,' said the presbyter; 'but I did not like to endorse all that he said.' A fit of laughter went round the room. Thirty-five years ago there seemed something irresistibly ludicrous in applying a commercial word like 'endorse' to agreement or disagreement on a theological matter." It appears then that if the language owes much to the purist it owes not a little to the innovator. While the best talkers carefully avoid the vagueness and vulgarity of ephemeral slang, they are not afraid, on occasion, to make a bold use of the tongue they have mastered and to indulge in those imaginative expressions which, though condemned by the purists as linguistic corruptions, are ultimately accepted as useful figures of speech.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN COURTS.

Lord Coleridge, chief justice of England, upon his recent visit to this country, spent much of his time in noting the course of American jurisprudence, or, rather, the practice of the law in the United States. Among other things he was strongly impressed with the fact that no person composing the general government could reach out and touch a private citizen. He saw, too, that the private citizen in the United States was, as nearly as it is possible to be, his own master, and that the administration of both government and law were more localized in this country than in any other. This he found to be true even of the federal courts, which are especially districted for the convenience of the public. In England, on the contrary, everything is centralized, especially the higher courts. To the majority of the people these are mysteries. Those who get into them seldom get out. John Stuart Mill, in his treatise on "Political Economy," writes that but three bankruptcy cases were disposed of in the English equity courts in fourteen years. Dickens, likewise, in his description of the chancery court in "Bleak House," did not exaggerate—he simply exhibited naked fact. All this has resulted from the centralization of the English courts. They are not localized, so that they do not come near the people or feel the people's criticism. There is much in this manner of law practice which should be reformed. Lord Coleridge is a liberal and progressive man, who belongs to what is known as the John Bright school of political thinkers. His heart and his natural characteristics obey the conclusions of his reasoning. He has seen and appreciated what is good in our system. Scarcely had he been home before he framed and presented to parliament a bill to change the number and character of the English courts. The principal object of this bill is to bring the administration of law nearer to the Englishman's door—a thing that every liberal-minded man in England will heartily indorse.

This action of the lord chief justice should teach us a lesson. He came to us to learn the best we had to give. We could return with him to England and learn an equally important lesson from the practice of the criminal courts, as to the power of the judge in instructing a jury. The difference in the results of trials by jury in the United States and in England has frequently been noted by the press of both nations. The English papers almost jeer at the American jury, that gives a criminal the benefit of every possible doubt, irrespective of other direct evidence, while the sentimental writers of this country affect a horror at the so-styled "undue haste" with which justice is meted out in England. Among the eminent jurists of America, however, the feeling has become a well grounded belief that our manner of practice is not the best, and that instead of proving, as intended, the safeguard of the helpless and a secure haven for the innocent, it is too frequently a barrier interposed between justice and crime, by which the very worst classes are often enabled to escape punishment. The recent killing of Carey by O'Donnell, the subsequent trial of the latter in England and his close-following execution, are taken as a subject by the American Law Review for the purpose of drawing comparisons between the power of judges over a jury in England and in the United States, which it does not at all to the credit of this country. It says: "The trial of O'Donnell came and went and ended, as every intelligent person knew it would end, in the conviction and hanging of O'Donnell. There is scarcely a doubt of three things: 1. That O'Donnell was not sent by any Irish society for the purpose of following Carey to his exile and killing him. 2. That O'Donnell, having discovered Carey's identity, killed him out of hatred of his character and love of notoriety. 3. That according to the common law of England, O'Donnell was fairly tried and convicted, and justly hanged for his crime. The feature of the trial which ought to attract most attention suggests in a marked degree the difference between the power of the judge in jury trials in England and in America. When the jury came in doubting about Carey having drawn his pistol on O'Donnell, Mr. Justice Denman told them that there was no evidence that Carey had a pistol. A judge in the United States, except possibly in the federal courts, would not have told the jury this, but would have left them to wrestle with any doubts they might have as to the facts, the best way they could. In other words, by the system of jury trial in vogue in England the judge instructs the jury as to the law, and also, in his discretion, advises them as to the facts. He sums up the evidence, pointing out its bearings, and giving them his own views as to the probative value of various portions of it. But in most of the American state courts the judge is not allowed to do this. Our constitutions, for the most part, prohibit judges from charging juries on questions of fact. The jury takes the facts as they have heard them narrated by the witnesses through a trial lasting in many cases several days, garbled and perverted by counsel in their arguments, and wrestle with them in their retirement as best they can. Is it a wonder that, in so many cases, the unfounded doubts which cunning advocacy thrusts into the minds of weak jurors—the judge sitting by, a mere moderator of the proceedings without any power to aid the jury—result in verdicts of 'not guilty' in plain cases of the most atrocious character? There is scarcely a human doubt that O'Donnell was guilty and justly convicted. There is scarcely as little doubt that he would have been acquitted by almost any American jury. Jury trial as practiced in America is utterly inadequate to the protection of society."

Representative Rice of Massachusetts made a strong statement, but one which his experience in congress has satisfied him is true, when he said, "As well seek to dam the Mississippi river within paper ball as to keep men from an overflowing treasury by any constitutional argument." After helping the sufferers by the Ohio valley floods the relief of the sufferers in the Mississippi valley could not well be denied. Mr. Ellis of Louisiana laid down the rule that relief should be afforded by congress "when the calamity was so widespread as to baffle the aid of the local authorities." But that leaves the question of the ability, diligence and sympathy of the local authorities. In the recent Ohio disaster Cincinnati gave early notice that she would take care of herself. Other communities might not be able to, or might not have the disposition. The doctrine, as it has been accepted by both parties, makes the country, as to floods, a mutual insurance organization. Why should not losses by fire be placed on the same footing? The only questions to be asked, according to the new legislation, are what is the extent of the calamity and what is the state of the public treasury? One effect has already been produced by congressional action in this behalf. Citizens have said if the government is to take this matter in hand our share will be paid by our proportion of the tax. The metaphor used by Mr. Rice is a strong one, and exceedingly ominous.

The testimony of Mr. Bliss in the investigation into the conduct of the star route cases would indicate that Mr. Tilden's purpose to renounce the presidency was not so determined before the composition and opinion of the democratic convention was apparent, and was more the result of political than of physical durability. He sent an attorney to Washington to gather evidence, when suspicions that there was something wrong in the star route service were first aroused, and had his campaign thunder ready before the convention which nominated Hancock met. To have turned this over to Hancock would have been reforming without advantage to the reformer, which is more than would be expected from any politician of either party. A rejected commander seldom turns over his plans or his information to his successor, and it was reasonable for Mr. Tilden to regard evidence, acquired at his own expense, as private property or a fund in reserve for future contingencies. At any rate, although he may be generously and patriotically grieved at the defeat of General Hancock, he has the satisfaction of knowing that the democratic party now recognizes how much it has lost in compelling him to renounce the presidency.

It was clearly enough explained by THE OREGONIAN at the time that, in collecting certain taxes of some of the banks in this city, the sheriff proceeded under the old law, which the new mortgage tax law, so called, did not annul. As a matter of fact, mortgages, or debts secured by mortgage, have always been taxable in Oregon as they are in all parts of the country. They are included in the term "personal estate" or "personal property" in the general laws of this state. The new law prescribed a new method of taxing them, that is to say, it taxed them as real estate instead of personal property. The decision of Judge Deady rendered it illegal to tax them as real estate, because the new law was unconstitutional, but the decision did not effect their liability to be taxed as personal property. What the sheriff did was simply his duty as prescribed by section 98 of chapter 57 of the general laws. While his action was in effect a nullification of Judge Deady's decision, it was not in contempt of it or in defiance of it, as a correspondent has asserted. Mortgages are still subject to taxation, as they have always been, in the manner provided by law.

General Sherman has made another of his racy speeches at the dedication of a hall in the Illinois state house for the preservation of the state battle flags. He spoke of Jeff Davis as execrated and despised by every Union man and hated by his own people. But President Lincoln, he said, was America's greatest type of manhood, a greater man than Seward or Chase the ablest and most learned man in the principles of human liberty the world had ever known. He was head and shoulders above every man. General Sherman said he would sooner be the dead Lincoln than any living man, not excepting King William.

The house of congress has passed a bill granting a pension to Mrs. Sarah E. Seeleye, who served as a soldier in the Union army for three years during the war, until, when sick and ordered to the hospital, she deserted to escape the detection of her sex. The opponents of woman suffrage have always insisted that if woman is going to cast the ballot she must be ready to carry the musket. When this argument is advanced hereafter the woman can point to Mrs. Seeleye as their answer, but if they are strictly accurate they will not omit to say that it was in the disguise of a man that she carried the musket.

The law partner of the agent who went to Washington to gather evidence in regard to frauds in the star route service for Mr. Tilden, was Mr. Knox, who had been a classmate and chum of Garfield at Williams college. Knox informed Garfield of what he heard from McLean affecting Dorsey and others, and it was for that reason, Bliss says, that Dorsey, while his personal relations with Garfield were not changed, had no influence with him in the making of his cabinet.

In a test case involving the claims of the creditors of the Augustinian Friars in Lawrence, Mass., against the archbishop of the diocese, a verdict has been rendered in favor of the claimants, which will have an important bearing upon the responsibility of the church authorities for property held in their name and for the benefit of the church.

A GROWING SUBURB.—This morning the Sellwood Real Estate Company advertise, asking to lease or buy a steamboat capable of carrying no fewer than 150 passengers. Persons whose business does not take them to this suburb have little idea of its steady, healthy growth. Two years ago the little steamer Dolly was able to carry all the passengers between Portland and her southeastern suburb. One year ago the Sellwood was built, and when she was planned it was thought that she would be amply large for three or four years; but the population of the village and travel have so increased that she is unable to accommodate the traffic, and now has to refuse passengers at morning and evening trips. Hence the necessity of a larger boat. The Sellwood will still be retained by the company as an auxiliary steamer.

YESTERDAY'S FIRE.—The list of losses by the South First street fire yesterday morning, though obtained hurriedly and within a few minutes of the time of going to press, was in the main correct. White & Riggen's agency had most of the insurance in the block, in the Phenix of Brooklyn, as follows: John Maher, $2050 on building and $200 on furniture, M. McAvit, $2000 on building; J. H. Rice & Son, $1000 on stock of drugs. The Oakland Home had $200 on building, and the Hamburg Bremen had $300 on a piano of Maher's. Edmundson, proprietor of the saloon, lost $700 on stock and $450 in greenbacks. The origin of the fire is unknown.

MONTANA AND ALASKA.—The Northern Pacific railroad has just issued a neat pamphlet entitled "The Wonderland of the World." It is neatly gotten up, and much of the space is devoted to Yellowstone park and the civilized portions of Alaska. They may be had free on application at the general passenger office, corner Front and Washington streets.

BRIEF MENTION.

The democrats of Albina have elected C. B. Van Hanson and M. McK... delegates to the county convention.

In addition to the programme published yesterday of tonight's Y. M. C. A. concert Master Isaac Neumann will render a medley upon the violin.

For the return of a wagon nut to the office of United Carriage and Baggage Transfer Company, Second and Stark, a reward of $2 50 will be paid.

William H. Courtney and wife were yesterday authorized by the county court to adopt an orphan boy baby left at their house two or three years ago. The boy now bears the name of Francis Joseph Courtney.

The remaining portion of the stock of A. Salmon, the bankrupt merchant, will be sold at the store by the sheriff this morning at 10 o'clock, to satisfy a judgment obtained in the state circuit court by the Evening Telegram. The amount for which the execution was issued, together with costs, is about $150, the original sum being money due for advertising.

Thomas Lewiston, runner for the International hotel, and Barnes, the runner for the Barton house, were arrested last evening by Policeman James for soliciting in too loud a voice. Barnes was arrested not long since for using his voice too freely. They both deposited bail for their appearance to answer to the charge.

The chief clerk in one of the railroad offices has a facetious way of labeling official papers. All applications for positions, and matters which cannot be disposed of until something turns up, are put into a box marked "Micawber"; Unsettled matters, not likely to be straightened out for some time, are labeled "Ireland."

ONE "DEAD" PIONEER HEARD FROM.

In the list of those who voted here April 5, 1852, published in last Saturday's OREGONIAN, was the name of M. M. Mead, supposed to have died in California. The following unique denial came in last night's mail addressed to the editor:

Your report is true of the vote I cast
In eighteen hundred and fifty-two,
But if my recollection is good of the past,
Some one gave wrong information to you.

I never was in California's state,
By bright gold or pleasures led,
Her still is my silvered head,
Never in California was I dead.

M. M. MEAD.

Salem, Marion county, Oregon.

THE OREGONIAN will be pleased to publish any further corrections if other errors have been made in the list, also information concerning those who are unknown here.

THE EAST SIDE.

BIDS FOR ENGINE HOUSES.

Bids for building a two story frame engine house for the First ward fire company, and raising the house of the Third ward company and building a brick basement underneath, are as follows:

First ward engine house—William Plank, $2169; T. A. Davy, $1965; Haines Bros., $1670; Harris & Co., $1564; C. R. DeBurgh, $1970; Wood & Buchanan, $2510; G. O. Bakely, $1115; John Becker, $1573; Blakney & Bro., $1720; G. M. Adams, $1930. It will be seen there is a difference of $907 between the highest and lowest of the above bids.

Third ward engine house—T. A. Davy, $1243; Garrison & Co., $1175; C. R. DeBurgh, $1625; Blakney & Bro., $1467; G. M. Adams, $1250.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Paul Schulze will return Friday from New York.

Mrs. A. L. Stokes received a telegraphic summons yesterday to the bedside of her mother, who is seriously ill in Boston, and will leave this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Tuthill and daughter returned Sunday from New York. Mrs. Tuthill has been east since last fall, and comes back with much improved health.

Mr. H. W. Kusoff of St. Paul, secretary of the Northern Pacific Beneficial Association, an organization composed of the employes of the railroad for aid in case of sickness, is in the city. He will leave for home in a day or two.

COMPLAINT OF SCARCITY OF WATER.

PORTLAND, Apr 1 7

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Will some one explain why a long time elapsed before any water could be thrown by the engines at Sunday night's fire? As the engines and hose were promptly in position the large building at the end might have been saved had anything but a weak stream of water been obtainable at the commencement of the fire. Engines without water are parallel to Hamlet without the prince of Denmark, and such a state of things, if continued, must raise the insurance rates in Portland. EARLY BIRD.

HANDSOMEST TRUCK IN TOWN.—Our reporter's attention was yesterday called to a handsome new spring truck made by Thuesdale & Benedict, at the corner of Second and Salmon streets, for the enterprising furniture house of G. Shindler & Co., First street, between Morrison and Yamhill. There is not another such handsome thing on wheels in this city, and it reflects as much credit on the owners for their good taste as on the manufacturers for their good work. This elegant truck has been under course of construction since last October, and is well worth the time spent on it. The running gear is blue and its bed magenta, and well upholstered for the purpose of saving furniture from scratches during transportation. The material is of the best obtainable order, combining durability with lightness. This truck is beyond all question the handsomest thing of the kind in Portland, and beginning on Monday will be in constant use at G. Shindler & Co's.

THE CHRISTIAN UNION'S WORK.

Reports of the Anniversary Meeting Sunday Night—A Criticism of our County Jail System—The Insane.

At the anniversary meeting of the Christian Union, which took place in the Unitarian church Sunday evening some exceedingly interesting notes of work done were read by the heads of sub-committees. A course of social science lectures has been instituted through five seasons, and systematic interest has been taken in public institutions, especially the insane asylum at East Portland, and since its removal to Salem. In the address of the presiding officer, among other subjects, the prisons of the county were named, and the occasion was taken to arraign as a system the congregated idleness of the county jail. While our own county jail is under good management, considering its miserable quarters, the best that can be done there is still to furnish a grammar school of crime. Mr. Eliot spoke on this theme as follows:

We wish to bear our renewed testimony against the county jail system, by which we congregate in enforced idleness men young and old, arrested or convicted for widest difference of crime and depravity. It is a total apology for such an outrage in moral order and such a fearful blunder in public policy to say that the system is well nigh universal. This is true, and in our country to-day over 60,000 inmates, as a standing number, are congregated in county jails. It is an open sore, the state's public school for criminal education, the corporate infamy by which in punishing one criminal the state produces at least three or more. What a mockery at self protection is in this view of crime! We put the criminals together indiscriminately, permit them to lie idle in the corridors and cells through every day of their confinement, curse them with enforced idleness, turn them out with the full brand of this vile companionship on them, and call this a system of reforming crime. Nothing but evil tradition perpetuates the barbarism and fatality of such treatment. Until we can classify the inmates of the county jail—give them solitary night cells, and provide for them work, we simply foster crime there, instead of preventing it. I am not advocating a sentimental treatment of criminals to the contrary. I should banish sentiment, let the name of justice; but solitary confinement, hard fare, and hard work are the only basis of hope that he who goes into jail will come out no worse than he entered. Such treatment at once rigorous and humanely applied, is the only basis upon which can be added wise advice and sympathetic, and the appeals of the gospel with hope that they will bear fruit in a reformed life. Until some such moral justice of society takes the place of our childish barbarism, many of us feel when we visit courts and prisons, as if we are the criminals in the sight of God—since we, by willful ignorance, or silent consent or moral cowardice as voters and citizens, sustain and countenance a method which doubles the corruption we pretend to cure.

Miss Spaulding, who represented the committee on visiting institutions, after giving statistics of their visit and distributions, also referred particularly to the county jail system and to the insane.

If it be asked, said she, "What good does all this work do?" we should say that if it did nothing more than to give these people something new and fresh and wholesome to think about, now and then, it were doing much. But this is not the end. To the insane it carries a spirit of neighborliness, of contact with the outside world, of sympathy that one human being can carry to another, all of which give great support to a person in health, with the momentum of an average busy life behind him, to say nothing of those whose disease and surroundings throw them morbidly in upon themselves.

The more we see of the insane, the more are we convinced of the fact that the prevailing system of entire isolation from the outside world is not the one most favorable to recovery. What our insane neighbor needs is a life more natural, more homelike, including occupation. He of all human beings needs to know that a warm, public heart beats near him and for him, a heart that he can be sure of for protection and appeal. Many in our asylum enjoy a friendly call, a shake of the hand, a look of assurance, a neighborly chat, or confidential talk, as much as any of us.

For the inmates of our jail little can be done, except to give them wholesome, attractive reading for partial occupation, so long as the jail system at large remains as it is. Dark, damp underground apartments, crowded with men of vicious thoughts who are entirely given over to idleness; unsuitable rooms for women and no rooms at all for boys, offer very poor soil for human cultivation. Perhaps the chief good that can come from visiting our jail, except as we have said, that of breaking in upon its idle routine, is to arouse people to the thought of what a festering sore we have in our community, which we diligently poultice with one hand while we inject new poison into it with the other.

To the county farm our visits are less frequent than to other institutions. Its occupants are transient sick and maimed. Most of them, either from disease or ignorance or foreign birth, are unable to read, so that the work there is necessarily more general than specific, the work that comes from a friendly hand, or words of courage and strength.

Enough, however, may be seen at any of our institutions to arouse the community to a sense of the alarming extent to which crime, misfortune, and misery exist in our midst. Enough to rebuke, as with a tongue of fire, our indifference, or rather our inertness in dealing with the causes and prevention of crime. The time is when we may say of organized action what Burns said of individuals:

"Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn."

Private philanthropy can do something to relieve or modify, but nothing short of the plowshare of a determined public will can uproot and destroy the roots of these spreading miseries and crimes.

Merchants' Hotel.

On or about the first of May the above hotel, situated on the corner of Third and D streets, will be thrown open to the public by the proprietors, Messrs Kellogg, Davis & Co. When completed it will be the best arranged and most neatly furnished hotel on this coast. It is a handsome brick structure, with all the modern conveniences and appliances, containing 175 well lighted, large and commodious rooms. On every floor are large, neat bathrooms with hot water attachment and patent closets, also large comfortable parlors, in fact everything for the convenience and comfort of its guests. There will be improved electric bell attachments to the various rooms, also gas. There is also a large hydraulic elevator to carry guests to their respective quarters. Too much cannot be said of this hotel as there has been no pains or expense spared in making it complete in every detail. Messrs Kellogg & Davis have been actively engaged in the hotel business here for years, and are capable of catering to and supplying the wants of their guests. Due notice will be given through our columns of the opening of this magnificent building, which is well worth a visit.

ANDREW ROBERTS.

This old reliable clothing, tailoring and hat store, at the corner of First and Alder streets, is one of the best and oldest in Portland. The effort of the proprietor at all times has been to keep in stock a kind of goods that may be safely recommended as first-class. Mr. Roberts has perfected arrangements with eastern manufacturers by which he has selected material and into all his ready-made clothing, and the best of workmen only are employed in its production. He goes east about the first of May to buy cloths and superintend the manufacturing of the same. In this way all of the ready made clothing of this store is equal to custom-made goods—in fact, they are really custom made goods, the only difference between them and the goods produced by a tailor is that they are not made by measurement. But having a very large stock of all sizes and grades of goods the customer can be fitted to his exact measurement as well as if ordered from a tailor. In addition to this Mr. Roberts has a first class cutter and tailor in his own employ, who will make up suits to order and correct measurement. In the hat department Mr. Roberts has a full supply of the latest styles. So in the furnishing department this store has facilities for obtaining these goods at low prices for an extra quality of goods that are unexcelled in this city. Mr. Roberts has just received a large importation of goods in all lines, that are elegant, stylish, desirable and good in all respects. Mr. Roberts is a man of fine business habits, and carefully culls his employes for their adaptibility to his line of business.

THE SHOALWATER BAY RAILROAD.

Getting Ready to Commence Grading this Summer—More than Half the Stock Subscribed.

Mr. L. A. Loomis, president of the Ilwaco, Shoalwater Bay and Gray's Harbor Railroad Company, is in the city upon business connected with the proposed enterprise. He stated to an OREGONIAN reporter that $51,000 of the $100,000 had been subscribed—$7000 in Portland. At the annual meeting of the company held in Astoria, the following gentlemen were elected directors: I. W. Case, L. A. Loomis, B. A. Seaborg, H. S. Odle and A. W. Berry. It was decided to make a permanent survey, to the grading in the most difficult places, and to get out the ties this summer. Part of the grading in swampy places can be done more economically and better in the fall, and work on these portions will not begin till then. By next spring it is hoped to have everything in readiness for laying the rails from Baker's bay to deep water in Shoalwater bay. Estimated cost of building and equipping this part of the road is $60,000. Cost of the line from the north side of Shoalwater bay to Gray's harbor will be about $70,000. Mr. Loomis reports passenger travel along the beach four times as great as at this season last year, and that freight offerings overtax the capacity of all the teams along the line. With the removal of the oyster trade, the settlement of the peninsular between Shoalwater bay and the ocean, the rapid development of the Gray's Harbor resources, and the great amount of passenger travel in summer, the company have no doubt of the success of their enterprise when once established.

Mr. Loomis will call on Portland capitalists to-day to interest them in the railroad. With proper exertions, the merchants of this city ought to get a large share of this coast trade.

CRANBERRY CULTURE.

The Pacific Cranberry Company, which owns 6000 acres of ... five miles above Ilwaco, have sixty acres ... twenty acres and a coating of sand placed on the same. Six or ... barrels of cranberry plants were received a few days since from New Jersey, which will be planted at once. The company have a little railroad which is used in carrying sand to cover the land, after the turf has been stripped off. The ground is well adapted for cranberry culture, and it may be confidently expected that before long importing cranberries from the east will be at an end.

The Daily Oregonian.

TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 8 1884.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY, April 7.

The new week witnesses a continuation of the clear, warm weather ruling since Thursday. Fruit trees are in blossom and look to be thriving. The freight movement is quite large, two steamers arriving yesterday and two sailing. The State of California brought a full cargo, the Alaskan very little. The Oregon carried out 1390 tons and the Idaho the usual cargo. The Walla Walla left in ballast for Seattle. The Alaskan is a new side wheeler, originally intended for service on the sound, but will doubtless ply elsewhere. Our trade with the Sound is larger than at this time last year. Merchants complain of the slow movement given freight for Seattle, as much of that recently sent required six days for delivery. It is hoped that this delay is only temporary, as it is due to a three days' rest at Tacoma. Our millers have succeeded in largely increasing their sales in this direction.

Under the influence of warm weather, both the Snake and the Columbia show some rise. At Riparia the Snake rose twelve inches in two days, standing at five feet two inches this morning. At the same time the Columbia was four feet five inches above low water at Celilo. The weather throughout the eastern section is clear and warm, thermometer ranging from 49 to 70. The rise in the Snake permits the removal of an increased quantity of wheat, to the relief of our shippers who purchased it some time since.

Overland receipts include 23 bbls 100 cs syrup, 60 bbls pork, 30 cs yeast powder, 2 cs bak powder, 25 cs tongue, 20 cs canned beef, 10 cs sugar lemon, 12 cs canned goods, 10 tcs hams, 27 sks seed, 10 cs sauce, 101 pkgs tobacco, 700 bxs tin, 209 kgs nails, 10 bls duck, 50 bls cotton bagging.

PRODUCE RECEIPTS—Past 48 hours: 2458 ctls wheat, 1010 bbls flour, 6015 lbs hides, 77 cs eggs, 24 bxs fruit. Also 2016 ctls wheat, 350 bbls flour, 8205 lbs hides from the eastern section.

FREIGHTS—Nothing doing on spot. An iron ship has been taken at San Francisco to carry Oregon flour to the United Kingdom at 31s 3d. With a two-dollar freight to San Francisco, this rate about equals 39s, or 5s less than is demanded for iron hence. Disengaged tonnage in port holds out for the old rates, or rather higher than has been paid. Our available supply is reduced to two wooden and three iron vessels, with four vessels considered due this month. Without a reduction in asking rates, business is practically impossible. Tonnage en route to this coast now foots up 180,000 registered tons, with 130,000 now on the coast disengaged.

WHEAT—Buyers inclined to bid down under lower values elsewhere. For a lot of valley, $1 49½ was bid, the offer expiring to-day. If not accepted it will not be renewed. A parcel of eastern Oregon was seeking a buyer to-day, but found no sale. The English markets are off a sixpence to a shilling a qtr to-day, for Atlantic qualities with the weakness extending more or less to the Pacifics. New York is unsettled at a decline of five cents, while Chicago options are low. San Francisco No. 1 shipping down to $1 52½. Indications now point to low markets with the beginning of next season as is shown by transactions in futures.

OATS—No buyers at 50 cents the market having been tried. We quote up to 49 cents for choice feed.

ONIONS—A spurt in values is noted and dealers here are asking 4 cents. San Francisco quotes 4@4½ cents. Stocks here are believed to be light and while values may further appreciate it is uncertain.

POTATOES—As stocks are lowered and unimproved tone is manifest. This does not extend to values as yet. Offers are 45 cents for good qualities.

HOPS—Stocks on the coast are placed as low as 1300 bales, including 300 territory. The local market is inactive in the absence of buyers. Other markets are dull and showing some weakness. Eastern brewers are again using substitutes to a large extent.

BUTTER—California roll selling at 25 cents with little left over. There is still plenty of eastern tub on hand which compares well with much of the California received. Local dairy, 30@35 cents in a small way.

POULTRY—Chickens, irregular at $5 a $6 50. Turkeys wanted with sales at 17 cents. Ducks and geese come slowly at old prices.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The British iron bark Ophelia, 1154 tons, will soon take berth at Liverpool for this port, in Janion & Son's line.

Parrott & Co. are the charterers of the ship Helicon.

The Alaskan is at the foot of D street. She will require new paint and general overhauling before going into service. She left San Francisco last Thursday at 5 P. M., meeting heavy weather that night and next day. In smooth water she gave the State of California a close chase without working to full extent. Possibly to many she is a disappointment, but when completely fitted up will present a much finer appearance. She has already been dubbed the "white elephant" by those who consider her an expensive boat to run. Her route is not fully decided upon, but if the Astoria run is considered a profitable one she will ply on our waters.

The Columbia sails from San Francisco to-morrow.

The British ship Oberon, hence December 12 with 33,625 ctls wheat, shipped by Sibson, Church & Co., has arrived out in a run of 116 days. She is the first of the December fleet to report out.

The British bark Martaban, hence November 12 with 23,094 ctls wheat, shipped by Sibson, Church & Co., has arrived out in a passage of 147 days.

During the truce. It was a neutral ground during the armistice between Sherman and Johnston. Soldiers of both armies filled their pouches with the tobacco stored there, and, after the surrender, marched home. Soon orders came from East, West, North and South, for "more of that good tobacco." Then, ten men ran a little old factory. Now it employs 800 men, uses the pick and pack of the Golden Belt, and the Durham Bull is the trade-mark of this, the best tobacco in the world. Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco has the largest sale of any smoking tobacco in the world. Why? Simply because it is the best. All dealers have it. Trade-mark of the Bull.

If you're going for a package of Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco, make sure you don't get cornered by the bull.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Having been afflicted all my life with Scrofula, my system seemed saturated with it. It came out in Blotches, Ulcers, and Mattery Sores, all over my body." All baneful infections of the blood are promptly removed by this unequalled alterative.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN

IS THE MOST SUCCESSFUL PHYSICIAN ON the Pacific coast in the treatment of all Chronic and Difficult Diseases of the Sexual Organs.

He will guarantee to cure any form of disease of the generative organs or private disease, if the patient follows his advice and treatment.

He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the FOLLIES OF YOUTH, such as Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two-thirds of all the chronic diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by a majority of the Medical Profession.

Persons afflicted by any form of sexual disease or weakness often delay in calling upon the proper physician in time from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitution becomes corrupted, their organization broken down, and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence. Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances. Lost manhood perfectly restored.

Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint and all diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure with in full, if they are curable, and if not, he will tell you so.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.

CANCER.

The experience in the treatment of Cancer with Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) would seem to warrant us in saying that it will cure this much dreaded scourge. Persons so afflicted are invited to correspond with us.

I believe Swift's Specific has saved my life. I had virtually lost use of the upper part of my body and my arms from the poisonous effects of a large cancer on my neck, from which I had suffered for 20 years. S. S. S. has relieved me of all soreness, and the poison is being forced out of my system. I will soon be well.

W. R. ROBISON, Davisboro, Ga.

Two months ago my attention was called to the case of a woman afflicted with a cancer on her shoulder, at least 5 inches in circumference, angry, painful and giving the patient no rest day or night for 6 months. I obtained a supply of Swift's Specific for her. She has taken 6 bottles and the ulcer is entirely healed up, and the woman is in better health than for years past, seems to be perfectly cured.

REV. JESSE H. CAMPBELL, Columbus, Ga.

I have seen remarkable results from use of Swift's Specific on cancer. A young man near here has been afflicted 8 years with the most angry looking eating cancer I ever saw, and was nearly dead. The first bottle made a wonderful change, and, after 5 bottles were taken, he is nearly or quite well. It is truly wonderful.

M. F. CRUMLEY, M. D., Oglethorpe, Ga.

UNDER LIP AND INSIDE OF CHEEK EATEN AWAY BY CANCER.

My father had an eating cancer for several years, which had eaten away his under lip and the inside of his cheek down to the bottom of his gums. We got some of Swift's Specific and gave him, and the effect has been wonderful—almost miraculous. The cancer is all healed, and he is perfectly well. Everyone here said it was only a question of time about his death, and he was the talk of the country. I hope you will publish about my father's cure and send the same circulars to give to my friends who are afflicted.
